Motor Racing The Early Years

This is the story of motor racing as it once was, from the early days to the fifties; the story of those Olympians who bestrode the tracks - such as Carraciola and Ascari, Fangio and Moss - and of their cars - the Alfas, Mercedes, Maseratis and Ferraris - all giants of another, more compelling age. Motor racing dates back to the days of the early motor car itself. Back then, however, it wasn't motor racing as we know it today. There were cars which were far from sophisticated. They were huge gas guzzlers and low on power. They were unreliable and would break down at any time. They even lacked...
